

We are totally opposed to the idea of letting companies own combinations of newspapers and television and radio stations in the same city, and any one company could control TV stations reaching nearly half of U.S. homes.

Even with the public's ability to access a wide variety of information, most news still comes from newspapers, television, and radio stations. Putting these in the hands of fewer and fewer owners limits our ability to acquire a wide-variety of opinions and news events; and therefore limits our ability to participate in our democratic form of government. One of the first steps toward control of the government by the few is control of the media. Don't do it!

Neil O. and Jennifer S. Miller